When she learned of her plight the woman declared her purpose of coming here to be near him while he is in prison. She declared that she oved him devotedly.

The specific charge upon which Weber was arrested was made by Adolph Ludke, of the jewelry firm of Ludeke & Co., at No. 170 Broadway. who alleges the larceny of a pear necklace valued at $5.500. Other jewelry firms which have suffered are Theodore B. Starr, Joseph Frankel Sons, David C. Thompson & Co., Kleinschmidt, Howland & Co., Eisenman Brothers, Saunders, Muerer & Co. and Rudolph & Snedeker. These various firms united in employing the Pinkertons to bring about the capture of Weber.

"Weber has been known in the jeweiry trade for many years," said Mr.
Ludoke to-day, "and until recently bore an excellent reputation. He is unmarried and about forty years of age. He commenced his career as a young man with Theodore B. Starr, and was later in the employ of Schuman & Sons at Twenty-second street and Broadway. Then he branched out for himself on Fifth avenue, near Thirty-third street.

He gave Mr. Starr the pawntickets for all or nearly all the goods he had taken, amounting to nearly $100,000. Most of the pawn-tickets were made out in the name of a young woman who is said to be an actress. She is well known here in New York, and her mother, I am told, lives in Bethlehem, Pa.

"There is no charge against the wom an, as Weber admitted giving her the jewels to pawn, and there is nothing to show that she knew how he came into their possession. To Mr. Starr, I am told, Weber said he had lost much of the money raised on the jewelry by speculation in Wall street.
